“ Roger and Family, I don't know how I missed your mother's obituary in the paper but I did. I saw the piece in today's Jonesboro Sun. I know that you know this already but there is "Joy" in the midst of grieving. There is grace to sustain us until we see them again. I will say that it is a weird feeling when both parents are gone but God is faithful to fill our minds with precious memories. You are so right in the column when you said that her generation is different than today's. No one in your large family can "Be" what she was to everyone else-- BUT, Praise God, you can live for Jesus and help others along the way and that will make her and Jesus proud. "Her children rise up and call her Blessed" - sounds like a perfect verse for her.

With Joyful sorrow,

“ So many great memories of grandma that I don't even know where to begin! She was such a strong, loving woman that showed equal love to all of us and that's a hard task with as many of us Brands that there are! 😊 she never once showed any less love to any of us! Yes, she might have gotten on to some of us a little more than others, but hey what I can say, Brands are stubborn people and sometimes we just don't learn the first time! 😊 none of us will ever forget the big White House where we grew up knowing it was full of so much love because inside it somewhere there was grandma waiting to approach us and smother us with all her love! She taught most of us how to truly cook, especially homemade biscuits and tamales, she taught us how to shell peas, and shulk corn. If it was in her garden we knew what it was and how to clean it! Not only did she teach us the things we needed to know in life, but she taught us to be one big loving family that stays together! Even when you get hit with the ball during one of our famous brand softball games, or get tackled down during one of our football games, you always got up and got over it...because grandma said to! I'm so blessed to have had grandma for as long as we have and knowing how pure and true her love for God has always been, I am happy to know that she is flying high with our Heavenly Father and smiling down on us! She may be gone from this earth, but she will never be gone from us! I know she will be with us all everyday watching over us and making sure we continue to live our lives the way she taught us!! forever in ours hearts grandma! We love you!!
